Timeless

I love it
And I hate it
And it hates me just the same
It calls my name once every day
But soon it’ll fade away

It fills my lungs,
With every breath
I find it harder to breathe

It ticks on the hour
Like a clock without the tower
Looming over me

Like time
But not
And often forgot

In silence
So sweet
Like a broken heartbeat
It’s Timeless.

Like a priceless rhyme
Or a perfect crime
That doesn’t seem quite right.
Timeless.

Like a moment in time
Or a small, white lie
Pure as the fish in the pond
Or a broken bond
Timeless

And when time ends
My broken bones will mend
But not until time starts again
